

Star of the show

The Chelsea Flower Show offers an opportunity to explore The Botanical Treehouse, a collaboration between landscape architects Randle Siddeley Limited and award-winning treehouse designer Blue Forest

The Botanical Treehouse

This exquisite two-storey garden sanctuary promises an immersive experience, skilfully curated to envelop visitors in a world of refined grown-up enchantment and marvels, including edible plants and aromatic botanicals, as well as a treehouse bar and raised deck. With sweeping views across Main Avenue, the tower offers guests a chance to unwind and savour artisanal botanical cocktails.

‘Outside spaces have a transformative effect on mood and wellbeing’

Beneath it is a whimsical children’s retreat, a delightful hideaway furnished with playful swings and vibrant interiors that will enchant visitors of all ages. Blue Forest is a highly creative company specialising in the sustainable construction of treehouse structures that appeal to everyone.

Randle Siddeley Limited

This leading London-based landscape architecture, construction and maintenance company includes a design division specialising in landscapes and gardens for private residences and commercial developments all over the world. With projects ranging from the most modest of city roof terraces to the

Gardens for fun and relaxation

‘Gardens are a sanctuary for relaxation and entertainment,’ says design director Gavin Heppelthwaite. ‘Since the pandemic, clients have been keen for seamless join between inside and out, suited both to intimate hosting and lively gatherings with family or friends. Outside spaces have a transformative effect on mood and wellbeing, as well as providing children with opportunities for exploration, imagination and sensory stimulation.’
